

Chapter 23: Facials

Across

2. The point over a muscle where pressure or stimulation will cause contraction of the muscle is the _____.

4. what type of skin appears shiny or greasy from clogged, dead cells in the follicle?

11. What skin condition contains areas of hyperpigmentation, wrinkled areas including areas not in the normal facial expression, and sagging skin from damage to elastic fibers due to chronic and frequent exposure to the sun over the client's lifetime?

12. Skin products that have a higher concentration of ingredients are _____.

13. Completed client intake forms and service record cards may contain _____ information about the client and must be kept in a secured room or cabinet.

14. What is a light, continuous, stroking movement applied with the fingers or palms?

15. _____ is determined by how oily or dry the skin is.

16. The difference between open and closed comedones is the size of the follicle opening, called the _____.

17. A cream-type enzyme applied to the face and rolled off the skin is a _____.

Down

1. The amount of sebum produced by the sebaceous glands determines the size of the _____.

3. What is a mechanical exfoliation that uses a closed vacuum to shoot crystals onto the skin?

5. What is a chopping movement performed with the edges of the hands whereby both wrists and hands move alternatively in fast, light, firm, and flexible motions against the skin?

6. Every massage should begin and end with which movement?

7. Acne bacteria cannot survive in the presence of oxygen, and therefore, are _____.

8. Light therapy using light-emitting diode (LED) uses blue light to treat skin that is _____.

9. What are scrubs that contain aluminum oxide crystals, along with other granular scrubs?

10. _____ is a form of petrissage in which the tissue is grasped, gently lifted, and spread out.