Business Vocabulary

Across

2. Part of a company’s profits (earnings) that it pays as money to stockholders.
3. An announcement appearing in financial publications such as The Wall Street Journal announcing a company’s Initial Public Offering (IPO.)
4. An individual or company (including a corporation) that legally owns one shares of stock in a stock company. The shareholders are the owners of a corporation.
6. A person who organizes, operates, and assumes the risk for a business venture.
8. A business or association usually formed to manufacture or supply products or services for profit.
10. The initial sale of stock to the public by investment bankers.
12. A company legally separate from stockholders who own it and the managers who run it.
14. A type of security that signifies ownership in a corporation and represents a claim to a part of the company’s profits or losses. Companies usually issue stock to raise money for a variety of reasons, including expanding or modernizing their operations.
15. If you own common stock in a U.S. corporation, you have the right to vote on company policies and to elect the company’s board of directors. You may vote in person at the annual meeting or authorize the board to vote on your behalf using an absentee ballot, or proxy.
16. Process by which assets of a business are converted to money.

Down

1. By law, each publicly held corporation must provide its shareholders with an annual report showing its income and balance sheet. In most cases, it contains not only financial details but also a message from the chairman, a description of the company’s operations, and an overview of its achievements.
5. A company that is owned by a person, family, or small group of investors that does not sell shares of stock in the company to the public.
7. The initial sale of stock to the public by investment bankers.
9. A corporation that doesn’t sell shares to the public. You cannot buy shares of a private company in the stock market.
11. Someone who risks funds by purchasing financial products with the hope the investments will increase in value over time.
13. Shares of ownership of a company in which the shareholder is guaranteed a dividend if one is declared and whose shares are usually not as volatile as common stock. Preferred stock holders do not have voting rights in company elections and come before the board at the annual meeting of shareholders.
18. The chance of losing all or part of an investment.
19. Indicates how much and how quickly the value of an investment, market, or market sector changes.

Business Vocabulary

- Shareholders
- Preferred Shares
- Common Shares
- Stockholders
- Common Stock
- Preferred Stock
- Dividends
- Initial Public Offering (IPO)
- Entrepreneur
- Company
- Public Corporation
- Private Company
- Partnership
- Sole Proprietorship
- Volatility
- Market Sector Changes
- Process by which assets of a business are converted to money
- Annual Report
- Journal announcing a company's Initial Public Offering (IPO)
- Stockholder's Right to Vote
- Corporate Policies

---

25. The condition of owning stock. The value of a long position is a stock’s current share price multiplied by the number of shares owned.