Name: _____ Date: _____

Medical Emergencies

Across

5. the study and prevention of blood related disorders

7. glands that secrete or release chemicals that are used inside the body

8. an abnormally low glucose level in the body

9. the type if biabetic disease that typically develops in childhood and requires synthetic insulin for proper treatment and control

10. the passage of an unusually large amount of urine in a given period. In diabetics, this can result from the wasting of glucose in the urine

11. a hormone produced by the islets of the pancreas that enables glucose in the blood to enter the cells, can be used in synthetic from to treat diabetes mellitus.

12. a form of hyperglycemia in uncontrollable diabetes in which certain acids accumulate when insulin is not available

Down

1. deep, rapid breathing; usually the result of an accumulation of certain acidswhen insulin us not avalible in the body.

2. a metabolic disorder in which the ability to metabolize carbohydrates is impaired, usually because of the lack of insulin

3. the type of diabetic disease that typically develops in later life and often can be controlled through diet and oral medications

4. an abnormally high glucose level in the body

6. a pathological condition that results from the accumulation of acids in the body