

Name: _____

Date: _____

Pelvis and Hip

Across

1. An intertrochanteric hip fracture is also known as _____.

2. A femoral shaft hip fracture is also known as _____.

4. This type of hip replacement replaces the femoral head only.

5. One initial exercise for total hip replacement.

8. For a total hip replacement, transfer into bed toward _____ side.

11. Coxa valga angle of inclination of the hip is defined as greater than _____ degrees.

12. Coxa vara angle of inclination of the hip is defined as less than _____ degrees.

14. Normal angle of _____ of the hip is 120-135 degrees.

16. 2 main functions of the _____ are to connect the legs to the body and to dissipate forces.

18. A leg length discrepancy could lead to _____.

19. One physical therapy concern for hip fracture.

20. A total hip replacement replaces components of femoral head and _____.

Down

3. Pediatric self-limiting degeneration of femoral head due to avascular necrosis.

6. Special test for congenital dislocation of the hip or developmental dysplasia.

7. Another name for total hip replacement is total hip _____.

9. For a THR posterolateral approach, one precaution is to avoid hip _____ > 80-90 degrees.

10. For a THR anterolateral approach, one precaution is to avoid combined position of hip flexion, abd, and _____.

13. Osteogenesis imperfecta is characterized by _____ bones.

15. For a total hip replacement, transfer out of bed toward _____ side.

17. One possible treatment for ischiogluteal bursitis.